ndless Summer

By M. Howell
The Boston Phoenix

Jimmy Buffett and the cult of the comfortable.

2 Trying to place Buffett in the music scene is both impossible and pointless; he don't play by those rules.

Forget Club Med and Carnival Cruises. The ultimate summer getaway [came to Great Woods] in it's purest, most potent form: Jimmy Buffett.

Jimmy Buffett, you say. Wasn't he the geezer with the songs about margaritas that was kinda catchy until it got overplayed on the radio? [Editor note: Where is Jimmy Buffett played, much less overplayed?] Who would go to see him? Well, roughly 45,000 people over three sold-out nights signed on to Captain Jimmy's party boat, and I'd be willing to wager that Buffett could have docked at [Great Woods] for another few days before folks got seasick.

One of the great enduring myths of rock and roll is the notion of "community" - the idea that people who are fans of this performer or that band have something deep in common because they like the same songs. How this Woodstock Nation fallacy survived Altamont - never mind how it continues to loiter in the minds of musicians, rock writers, and other social deviants - is a mystery, because it's so patently untrue, demonstrably untrue. Except in two cases: The Grateful Dead and Jimmy Buffett.

Both Dead Heads and Parrot Heads are ordinary folks who just like to get crazy once in a while - to take part in something that doesn't have any rules or make any judgements but simply asks that you share good spirits (in more ways than one). As Buffett writes in "The Parrot Head Handbook, I'm sure they all have day jobs, and do them willingly, but when Jimmy Buffett and The Coral Reefer Band come to town, these folks are there. They transform into Parrot Heads and become an essential part of the show."

A quick glance around reveals that Parrot

Heads come in all ages and sizes. There are portly graybeards with their arms raised swaying to "Volcano," junior-high kids wearing balloon-art headgear bopping along with "Grapefruit - Juicyfruit," entire families - including Grandma - proudly wearing baseball caps with their concert stubs stapled to them. "There is no Parrot Head outfit," writes Buffett. "I don't want them to have uniforms because I don't want my show to feel like Catholic school."

Well, he has certainly succeeded. Buffett's show resembles nothing so much as a PG-rated, intergenerational Spring Break, with Jimmy more MC than musician. In the Pavilion seats, the older fans party hearty, greeting each familiar song and old joke with a boisterous cheer and an upraised beer. But the real action is up on the lawn, which appears to be the turf of the college set. There, Buffett is less of a focus. Oh, sure, the new color videoscreens bring his face into the darkness, but this crowd are entertaining themselves; he's just helping things along. The lawn is packed with people line dancing, square dancing, and free-form dancing. The Coral Reefer Band splash both the slow songs and the mid-tempo ones with heady dollops of Caribbean tang, so even if you don't know the words (and everyone here definitely does), the most ungainly person can easily get into the swing.

That's the charm and the limitations of Jimmy Buffett's music. It goes down so easy - no sudden tempo changes, no sudden confrontation of angry emotions - that after a while you feel you've been lolling around on a sailboat too long. As the 72-songs Boats, Beaches, Bars & Ballads amply demonstrates, Jimmy Buffett is a happy-go-lucky guy who basically thinks that life is good, and that people who are uptight should just relax. He probably has a strong, wistful, romantic streak, but that doesn't pop up much. Mostly, Buffett is devoted to having a good time all the time.

Which is nothing to sneeze at. There's a reason the Beach Boys still provide much of the soundtrack to America's summer - and why that soundtrack is "Help Me Rhonda," not "In My Room." As Buffett puts it, "In today's world of fax machines, cellular phones, and 'call waiting,' we need to spend a little time with the fun part of ourselves, and that is what a Jimmy Buffett concert is all about." Swaying, swilling, and sing-alongs pretty much define an ideal summer. That's what Buffett brings to town.

Trying to place Buffett in the music scene is both impossible and pointless; he don't play by those rules. "They don't play my music on the radio anymore, and the way I look at it, that's something to wear around as a badge of honor these days." This son of a son of a sailor isn't descended from Elvis, the Beatles, or the Stones. Rather, he's the spiritual heir to another Jimmy - Jimmy Dodd, the avuncular, guitar-strumming host of The Mickey Mouse Club. As with that Jimmy, what Buffett plays is nowhere near as important as how comfortable he makes you feel. And everyone's invited to sing along.

Local

Parrot Head Clubs

Civic minded Parrot Heads in cities across the country have voluntarily gathered under the Buffett banner to promote peace, justice and the American way.

The Atlanta club paved the way volunteering for events sponsored by The Red Cross, UNICEF, Children's Wish Foundation...the list goes on and on. Inspired by these "random acts of kindness" other clubs were formed to assist in local community and environmental concerns.

In St. Louis, Parrot Heads, joined by several local businesses, raised funds to help victims of the Mother of All Floods. The Mississippi's length and lack of geographical prejudice also prompted the Des Moines, IA. group to give a hand to flood victims. The Dallas members maintain close ties with Ronald McDonald House. The Big Apple has a few less bruises thanks to the efforts of Heads determined to maintain their mile of highway.

Other clubs from Texas to Wisconsin adopt highways, clean lakes and rivers, and in general make their communities a better place to live.

It's important to note that these people do this of their own volition, with no prompting from Jimmy Buffett or Margaritaville. They should serve as an inspiration to others; Parrot Heads or not. Allow me this one high-minded digression: One of the deep secrets of life is that all that is really worth doing is what we do for others.

Lewis Carroll.

Buffett Bulletin

A compendium of information and insights designed to test your senses and amaze your friends.

Sara Venis from Miami sent us the results of a recent poll conducted by Scuba Diving magazine to determine divers favorite places and things. The Florida Keys and Key West dominate the categories too numerous to mention here. Of note, however, is the spot chosen for best cheeseburgers - Jimmy Buffett's Margaritaville Cafe in Key West.

Dr. J. Blaine John has, for the past few years, been a medical missionary in the bush of Zambia, Africa. "I want you to know your tunes have gotten me through many tough times over there, and I leave behind a few thousand new Buffett fans. The Silozi tribe of Mwandia loves your music!" Thanks for the postcard Doc. As you can see in the photo Jimmy, shown with several of his African Friends, has also made a personal appearance in the dark continent.

The Gambier Experimental College in Gambier, OH offers a course that we feel should be a prerequisite on all college campuses. Margaritaville 11-12: How to be a Parrot Head. "This workshop will disseminate knowledge of Jimmy Buffett and his music, and talk about the state of mind of being a Parrot Head in The Kenyon community."

Norm Moudry, Principal Parrot Head, from the Pacific Northwest sent an article concerning the Bellevue [WA] Downtown Association. "We have a reputation for being boring, and we're actually not," protested Caroline Robertson, president of the BDA. To celebrate it's 20th anniversary the Bellevue Bidness Bunch had a Jimmy Buffett-style buffet with Caribbean food, rum drinks, calypso music and casual, tropical clothing. We submit that the BDA be admitted to the Order of the Sleepless Knights.

Another president has also exhibited a penchant for Jimmy Buffett. Kathy Lewis of the Dallas Morning News writes, "What John Kennedy did for sailing...Bill Clinton may just do for reading. Every author in America would like to show up on the president's latest book list." A recent presidential purchase included "Time and the Art of Living" by Robert Grudin, "Culture of Disbelief" by Stephen Carter, and "Where is Joe Merchant?" by Jimmy Buffett.

Speaking of Joe Merchant...they know where he is - in jail! According to a recent Stars & Stripes he's an Airman (!) busted in Aviano, Italy for possession - 10 hits of LSD. Gives new meaning to Air Margaritaville. Funny, I assumed Joe was a roll-your-own kinda guy.

From the Miami Herald. Jimmy Buffett returned from a sailing/songwriting trip to the Bahamas early last week and delivered this message about speculation he might take on Republican Connie Mack for the U.S. Senate: "This is all very amusing and flattering. But no way in hell."

The Key West troubadour said that despite his concerns over the environment, the future of Florida and the success of such Democratic friends as Lawton Chiles, Bob Graham and Bill Clinton, he would be ill-suited to politics.

"I really like this job," he said. "Plus, I would fail the drug test miserably, and every other moral test that they would throw at me. At least in rock and roll we are honest about who we are."

Key West Conchs

Recent events in Key West have prompted Margaritaville to offer Key West High School T-shirts for sale across the country. Community-conscious Principal Bobby Menendez announced grand plans for the high school field and facilities; track, softball field, exercise course, racquetball courts and swimming pool. The opportunity for the public to access these facilities did not exist until recently. Principal Menendez has stated that lights and security will be added in the near future allowing Key Westers' the good fortune to take advantage of the excellent facilities. Jimmy was gracious enough to wear a high school shirt for the local press, demonstrating support on both a personal and professional level. Margaritaville has agreed to offer Key West High shirts and cap for sale, donating $2.00 from each item to the high schools' athletic program. This money is for the high school to use in conjunction with their athletic programs only, and is not related to the above mentioned public access project.

100% cotton crew neck T-shirts. Available in White or Grey only. Size S,M,L& XL. Please indicate Baseball or Phys. Ed. design. $14.95

'Round the Rock Race

The 20th Annual Around the Island Race is scheduled to be held in April 1994. The sailboat race, featuring the sleek and easily maneuverable Sunfish, has been sponsored by the Key West Sailing Club since 1974.

The race begins in the shallow waters at the end of White Street Pier adjacent to Higgs Beach, and follows the shoreline of Key West for a distance of approximately 15 miles. What makes this race unique is that a competing sailor may choose to sail in either direction, depending on wind speed, wind direction, tidal current, possible obstructions and water depth. In other words the sailor must decide whether to begin by sailing east; through the Caribbean along the public beach, around the top of the island into the somewhat calmer Gulf of Mexico, through the choppy waters of picturesque Key West Harbour, or setting off west; rounding the point off historic Fort Zachary early in the race. Either way, the sailor must deal with the Cow Key Channel Bridge. Key West's first two-lane link to the mainland is the major hurdle in the round the island race. Since this bridge is too low to sail under, the sailor must devise other means. Taking the mast down, dragging the boat while you swim through, or tugging the boat while you scramble along the slippery, rocky bank are all time tested methods of surpassing the Cow Key.

The winner is the first sailor to circle Key West, in either direction, and return to White Street Pier. Additional prizes are awarded, of course, for 2nd and 3rd place, and, in keeping with the spirit of the race, other prizes are presented for the youngest, oldest and last place seaman. The half-fast trophy is presented to the sailor who finishes in the middle of the fleet.

All entrants receive a commemorative T-shirt donated by Margaritaville and will be guests for dinner at the Key West Sailing Club. The Round the Island Race is open to anyone with a Sunfish and the will to compete.

The Key West Reader

Over the past century, the island of Key West has become home or haven to many of the country's most esteemed authors including Nobel Prize winner Ernest Hemingway and Pulitzer Prize winners Elizabeth Bishop, Philip Caputo, John Hersey, Alison Lurie, James Merrill, Wallace Stevens, Richard Wilbur, and Tennessee Williams. Here, for the first time, is the literary heritage of the Island City: Key West as seen through the eyes of twenty-five of our most renowned and esteemed writers. "We have here a significant achievement...a moving tribute to the power of language and to a rare place in the geography of the American Consciousness - a very special confluence of geography, climate, and culture coalesced into language working at the highest levels."

Bush Pilot Wins Rolex Award For Enterprise

Rolex Watch USA announced that Thomas Claytor has been named an Honorable Mention winner in the 1993 Rolex Award for Enterprise program. Claytor will receive an engraved Rolex Oyster Perpetual Chronometer timepiece and a commemorative scroll in recognition of his efforts to fly around the world in a small airplane to study the conservationist role of bush pilots in remote corners of the globe.

Rolex said the award recognizes Claytor's outstanding ingenuity and commitment to studying the unique contributions of bush pilots, and that his work embodies the true spirit of enterprise. Rolex seeks to honor and encourage with this program.

"I am very pleased to have been named an Honorable Mention recipient of a Rolex Award for Enterprise," Claytor said. "The award draws world attention to the unique role bush pilots play in maintaining fragile and endangered ecosystems. The award also symbolizes Rolex' visionary support for their vital effort on nature's outposts."

According to Claytor, the steady encroachment of industrialization and urbanization in the Third World has produced significant damage to the natural environment. Increasingly, bush pilots and their aircraft have served as guardians of endangered wildlife and indigenous peoples. To evaluate the effectiveness of these airborne conservationists, Claytor is flying around the world in his own bush plane and interviewing bush pilots in their remote outposts on seven continents. His journey began in December 1990 when he flew from Philadelphia, PA. to Greenland. During the past two years, his airborne trek has taken him to Iceland, the Faroe Islands, Europe and Africa.

Dear Jimmy,

I really would like to thank you. Your kindness in mentioning my trip in your Coconut Telegraph has helped me very much. Not only have some people assisted with donations, I even got a few Christmas cards. I have been away from home for over 3 years now, and little things like that help a lot.

I now have some good news for your readers. National Geographic has finished making a film on my trip. It is their premier film for the season and will air on TBS "Explorer" cable television on August 21st, 1994.

It will be nice to share this world with others - especially those who have helped to make this journey possible. Thank you - all of you.

Sincerely,
 Tom
