or I Went to Cheers and Nobody Knew My Name

"It's time for my annual pilgrimage to see the boss at work; to witness the organization, preparation and perspiration involved in assembling one of the most successful touring acts of the year. Parking-lot-partying Parrot Heads across the continent descend on partially covered amphitheaters for the summer time ritual. Summer time and the livin' is easy. For the typical Parrot Head perhaps, but these guys work. It takes a lot of time, people and effort to make a Jimmy Buffett concert this much fun."

That was 1996, and I was heading for Toronto for the opening of the Banana Wind Tour, and not much has changed on the road in the past 6 years. After the internet bubble burst, and dangling chads dominated the news we were brought jarringly back to reality last fall. Supposed trivial matters were delayed or postponed, but then an interesting thing happened. We realized that while perhaps trivial in the grand scheme of things, a ball game or concert does indeed serve a purpose. Jimmy would refer to it, of course, as escapism, and many would concur. Not denial, but rather a respite. We all need an occasional escape. I went to the Labor Day Weekend Show in Boston.

I left Florida and an approaching tropical wave late in August for a 61 degree evening in Boston and a Red Sox loss. The cab driver wound his way through the Big Dig and slid to a stop in front of my hotel near The Common. It was late and I was hungry and sometimes you want to go to where everybody knows your name. I did, but they didn't. This place doesn't look anything like Sam's place on television - for that you have to march the Freedom Trail to the historic Faneuil Hall marketplace on Boston's North End, they'll even give you a map.

Thursday morning, the weather is here and it wasn't beautiful. I bummed a ride in the Mailboat Records van to the Tweeter Center, formerly Great Woods, passed the new Gillette Stadium, formerly the short-lived CMGI Stadium, to see Jimmy Buffett who still is, thankfully, Jimmy Buffett. I made my way through the cramped backstage area, and while everybody didn't know my name, more did here than at the aforementioned Beacon Street Bar. The Coral Reefer Band was distributed throughout the dining area in various circles - social and otherwise. The painfully polite Mr. Utley talks about a new Club Trini release, while I pester jazz great Ralph MacDonald for stories of the old days. North Adams, Mass. native Amy Lee has a new CD, Inside The Outside, as does Peter Mayer, Stirrin' Up The Water. I still get tongue-tied around attractive women, so there was nothing I could ask of either of the dancers, without breaking out in high school hives. Took a few photos though. Takin' a break from all my worries sure does help a lot.

Charlie was there, and Slice fresh from a stint on the Billy Idol tour, Mooney the ski instructor, Richie the sound guy, and Battista the part time real estate mogul, Emmy Award costume designer Helen Hiatt...all knew my name too. And I knew them well enough to stay out of the way. All are professionals who value their position on the Buffett crew, and take extreme pride in their "back of the house" duties. "This is all arranged and budgeted months in advance," Charlie says. This is all he knows, all he's ever done, and while it may not be a traditional ladder, he's made the climb nonetheless. Moving a small army takes more discipline than I'm familiar with, but with proper communication and job assignment, everything falls into place.

Sound guys, light guys, video guys, all bustling to insure an enjoyable performance for drenched Parrot Heads. Steve Morse writes in The Boston Globe, "...enjoy they did, as a sold out crowd of 19,900 fans partied again to their chosen guru of escapism. And he clearly tried to please them. He dispensed with intermission (saving the lawn folks from another 20 minutes of wetness) and played 2 1/2 hours straight.

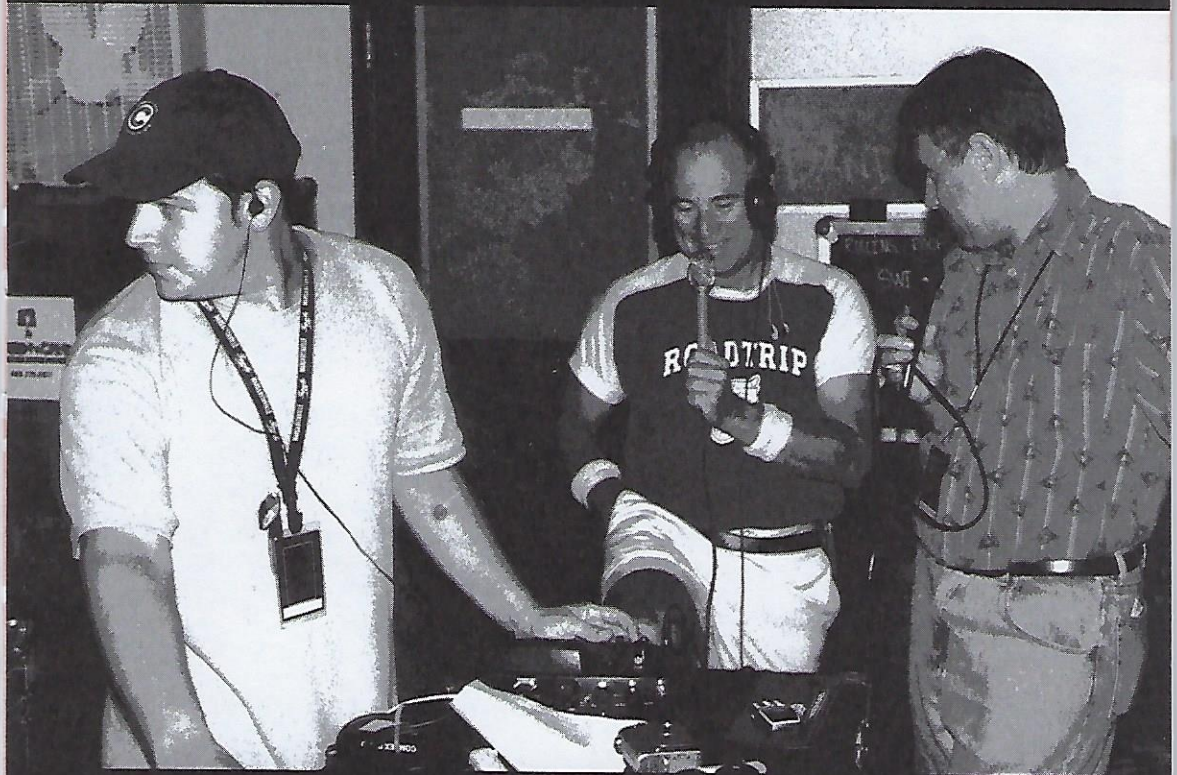

"It was not just a marathon show of energy, but was among the best shows he has ever done at the Tweeter Center, which he continues to call by its original name, Great Woods. He trotted out hits, but what made it special was the addition of eight new songs - the most he has ever debuted at one time. They came from this year's album, Far Side of the World, a musical travelogue enhanced by striking new video clips of a trip he took to Africa."

Saturday, August 31, and no dog days to be found. Crisp, cool weather dominates the northeast. Local crews scamper in and around the Tweeter Center shed, wiping down seats and arranging chairs. Wood chips are spread across the soggy lawn; a faux football field as viewed in a funhouse mirror, curved and elongated; a holding cell for those not quick enough on the Ticket Master redial button.

This time I rode out on a bus with veteran roadies and got a tour of their comfortably confined quarters. Bunks 3 high and 3 deep form the backbone, anchored in the rear by a sitting area and kitchen quarters up front. TV, DVD, a GPS satellite dish to pull in major sporting events, more comforts than home. This ride is more to my liking than swapping stock tips with the suits. These are the grunts, the soldiers, the backstage territorial tyrants who dispel any and all backstage myths. This is where they work, and there's little tolerance for the slack-jawed wanderer, getting in the way...and most of 'em know me. Nothing has moved since Thursday's performance, but everything must be checked; all instruments, microphones, sound, lights and video cameras are put to the test.

Radio Margaritaville has traveled to the Far Side of the World with Jimmy and the Coral Reefers this summer. And while there's nothing like being there in person, Radio Margaritaville listeners get something extra; the chance to join Jimmy live back stage. How this is done appears to be deceptively simple; Codecs boxes convert the audio into digital data and use complex algorithms to compress that data so it can be transferred over a single telephone line. Oh, and the box is purple. Program Director Steve Huntington has prepared material to discuss with Jimmy, always leaving ample time for timely topics.

Soundcheck is complete, Dan Butler's 18th annual seafood cook-off is devoured, and I need one more Corona; makin' my way through the world today takes everything I got. Five minutes to show time and over the chorus of Day-O Jimmy adjusts the headphones for his Radio Margaritaville pre-show chat and is kind enough to give me a "shout out" during the interview...and you're always glad you ca-a-ame.

TRYING TO REASON WITH CONCERT SEASON

Your Parrot Head Radio Station has turned up the volume on some pretty fantastic live concerts so far this season. On Wednesday, August 8, we caught up with Jerry Jeff Walker live from The Stephen Talkhouse in Amagansett, New York. And it just got better when it turned into a double-bill co-starring Jimmy Buffett.

Of course, Jimmy and the band are back on the road for another leg of the Far Side of the World tour. If you can't be there in person, tune in to Radio Margaritaville for every show LIVE. It's the next best thing to a front-row ticket, and Jimmy almost always stops by just before the show.

While big-time corporate radio continues to ignore your favorite music, Radio Margaritaville is proud to bring you the best music in the world including cuts from James Taylor's new album October Road.

Monty Hall of Let's Make a Deal fame paid Carson Cooper a visit on a recent Radio Margaritaville Road Trip. The legendary game show host revealed for the first time that he likes Jimmy's classic Door Number Three, but says Jimmy owes him a drink for calling him a you-know-what in the song.

Radio Margaritaville is proud to have been chosen as Web Site of the Day by Radio Daily News.com in August. Thanks

Our family of sponsors continues to grow. We tip our hat to Duchow's Boat Center, Victory Circle Chassis and Parts, J. D. Gordon and his new book, Island Bound, Maui Holiday.com, Bleachers of St. Michael's, Maryland, Nekton Diving Cruises, the Margaritaville Cafes in New Orleans and Orlando, and of course, Margaritaville Stores There's room for you, too. # CHEESEBURGER

in Indianapolis?

Jimmy Buffett's famous song comes to life with Cheeseburger in Paradise. It's as far away from the real world as you can get in a restaurant. As soon as you step in the door, you're reminded of swaying palm trees, sea adventures, and beautiful beaches. The structure itself is done in the Key West style, and even the flooring reminds you of a sandy beach with shells and beach towels from exotic locations. Musical memorabilia and nautical sports paraphernalia are scattered throughout the restaurant, plus fun touches like surfboard benches and a hammock for a hostess stand. And then there's the food.

Beyond the famed signature cheeseburger, there's an incredible selection of American and island favorites, as well as fun food choices like specialty pizzas and chocolate nachos. The expansive Tiki Bar serves up frozen concoctions, as well as cold draft beer. A late night menu, live entertainment, and special events like Full Moon Parties and Sunset Celebrations make the picture complete. Wave goodbye to the real world, and pull up a chair in paradise.

David Lindquist of The Indianapolis Star writes that Jimmy views the restaurant venture as a reward for some of his biggest fans. Jimmy recalled a 1997 concert at what was then called Deer Creek Music Center, a date seemingly doomed by heavy rains, to illustrate his affection for Indiana fans. During a bus ride to Hamilton County, Buffett and members of the Coral Reefer Band estimated that perhaps 5000 in an audience of 20,000 would brave the wet conditions. "But there were still people in the rain holding 'We want tickets' signs. That did not go unnoticed by yours truly."
